A Year’s Spinning

1
He listened at the porch that day,
To hear the wheel go on, and on;
And then it stopped, ran back away,
While through the door he brought the sun:
But now my spinning is all done.

2
He sat beside me, with an oath
That love ne’er ended, once begun;
I smiled—believing for us both,
What was the truth for only one:
And now my spinning is all done.

3
My mother cursed me that I heard
A young man’s wooing as I spun:
Thanks, cruel mother, for that word—
For I have, since, a harder known!
And now my spinning is all done.

4
I thought—O God!—my first-born’s cry
Both voices to mine ear would drown:
I listened in mine agony—
It was the silence made me groan!
And now my spinning is all done.

5
Bury me ’twixt my mother’s grave,
(Who cursed me on her death-bed lone)
And my dead baby’s (God it save!)
Who, not to bless me, would not moan.
And now my spinning is all done.

A stone upon my heart and head,
But no name written on the stone!
Sweet neighbours, whisper low instead,
“This sinner was a loving one—
And now her spinning is all done.”

And let the door ajar remain,
In case he should pass by anon;
And leave the wheel out very plain,—
That he, when passing in the sun,
May see the spinning is all done.

A Musical Instrument

What was he doing, the great god Pan,\(^1\)
Down in the reeds by the river?
Spreading ruin and scattering ban,\(^2\)
Splashing and paddling with hoofs of a goat,
And breaking the golden lilies afloat
With the dragon-fly on the river.

He tore out a reed, the great god Pan,
From the deep cool bed of the river:
The limpid water turbidly ran,
And the broken lilies a-dying lay,

1. God of woods, fields, and flocks, having a human body with goat’s legs, horns, and ears. According to legend, a nymph, Syrinx, when escaping from Pan’s pursuit of her, was metamorphosed into a reed in a stream. One version of the legend (the one used here) has Pan making this single reed into a shepherd’s pipe, in shape like a flute. In another version, he makes a pipe out of seven reeds in a row, an invention named in honor of the nymph.
2. Curses, malediction.

And the dragon-fly had fled away,
Ere he brought it out of the river.

3
High on the shore sat the great god Pan
While turbidly flowed the river;
And hacked and hewed as a great god can,
With his hard bleak steel at the patient reed,
Till there was not a sign of the leaf indeed
To prove it fresh from the river.

4
He cut it short, did the great god Pan,
(How tall it stood in the river!)
Then drew the pith, like the heart of a man,
Steadily from the outside ring,
And notched the poor dry empty thing
In holes, as he sat by the river.

5
“This is the way,” laughed the great god Pan
(Laughed while he sat by the river),
“The only way, since gods began
To make sweet music, they could succeed.”
Then, dropping his mouth to a hole in the reed,
He blew in power by the river.

6
Sweet, sweet, sweet, O Pan!
Piercing sweet by the river!
Blinding sweet, O great god Pan!
The sun on the hill forgot to die,
And the lilies revived, and the dragon-fly
Came back to dream on the river.

7
Yet half a beast is the great god Pan,
To laugh as he sits by the river,
Making a poet out of a man:
The true gods sigh for the cost and pain,—
Elizabeth Barrett Browning

For the reed which grows nevermore again
    As a reed with the reeds in the river.
